Seaman Kindergarten Classes Make Charitable Donation

By Denise Nash

Robert Seaman's three kindergarten classes recently held a fundraiser to benefit Pink Promises, a Breast Cancer Research Foundation.

Seaman students donated money to the kindergarten classes in exchange for a Pink Promise Ribbon, which was designed for donors to write a promise on the ribbon. The pink promise ribbons are now displayed in the hallway for all to see.

Pink Promises is the kindergarten community service program that has become an annual commitment to fundraising for the Breast Cancer Research Foundation. According to the kindergarten teachers, the money that was raised was donated to Stephanie Ginsberg at Pink Promises so that research may be funded to help to find a cure for breast cancer.

Robert Seaman's three kindergarten classes and teachers, along with Seaman principal Adam Winnick, present the money they raised to Stephanie Ginsberg and Pink Promises and show off the promises that the school made on the pink promise ribbons.
